2. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below :

Since July 1999, the Government of India has effectively put the liberalisation policy into practice. The drastic steps even include some administrative reforms for pruning the Government agencies. Last year Japanese business circles represented by the Shikawa mission called attention of their Indian counter parts to what they considered to be the major impediments in India. However, thanks to the almost revolutionary reforms put into effect by the Indian Government, these impediments either have been removed or now are on their way out. This development gives a new hope for the future of economic co-operation between two countries. At the same time, it should be borne in mind that there is a stiff competition with other countries, notably, China and South-East Asian countries, in this regard. The success stories of ASEAN countries welcoming Japanese investments with adequate infrastructure are already known in India but it may be useful if further studies of Japanese joint ventures in ASEAN countries be made by Indian business circles. The coastal areas of China have initiated a very active campaign to welcome foreign economic participation.

Questions :

- (1) What was the Indian Government's reaction to the hurdles in the way of bilateral trade between India and Japan ?
- (2) What drast steps were taken by the Indian Government to implement its liberalisation policy ?
- (3) Which mission represented the Japanese business circles ?
- (4) Give the synonyms of the following words :
(i) Drastic (ii) Pruning.
- (5) Which are countries from which Indian faces stiff competition ?

5. Translate into Hindi :

The word 'citizen' literally means a resident of a city or a person who enjoys certain privileges by virtue of his residence in a city. Thus when we speak of the citizens of London, New York or Calcutta, we mean those persons who live in there cities or exercise the rights which belong to them in this capacity.

In its wider sense, the word 'citizen' stands for a person who resides in a state and is subject to it in all matters, and it is in this wider sense that the word is generally used. Citizenship may, therefore, be understood to mean the rights, privileges, duties and responsibilities of a person who belongs to that state. The greatest right of a citizen is the protection of his life and property by law. <http://www.davvonline.com> 12
